

African American Heritage Trail, Washington, DC Nomination Criteria

Cultural Tourism DC and the DC Historic Preservation Office welcome nominations to the African American Heritage Trail, Washington, DC searchable database at www.CulturalTourismDC.org.

All submissions are judged for suitability by the African American Heritage Trail, Washington, DC, Advisory Committee. The committee is composed of historians and other specialists from numerous Washington, DC educational and cultural institutions, and Washingtonians with a special in African American history. Each January and June the committee selects new sites for posting to the African American Heritage Trail database.

The Advisory Committee chooses sites based on their ability to convey stories of African American history and culture in Washington, DC, or of national history. The committee gives priority for inclusion to buildings or landscapes that still exist in their historic form and can be visited or viewed from the exterior. However, those that have been razed or otherwise significantly changed will still be considered if they are well documented. In addition the committee looks for sites that:

- represent a “first,” such as a first school or church;
- are associated with a person, event, issue, or place of local and/or national importance;
- have multiple meanings or uses that convey the African American experience; and
- are geographically diverse within the boundaries of Washington, DC.

Please note: the African American Heritage Trail, Washington, DC does not include sites related to people who are still living. Without exception, sites will not be considered unless the associated historically significant person has been deceased for ten years at the time of nomination. In addition, a building bearing the name of a historic figure but otherwise not historically significant will not be included. Please consult the African American Heritage Trail, Washington, DC searchable database before submitting your nomination.

Checklist

In order to be considered for inclusion on the African American Heritage Trail, Washington, DC, the individual and/or group associated with a specific site must be:

1. A Washingtonian (individual or group) of significance who has lived or worked within the boundaries of Washington, DC during a pivotal or formative period; OR
2. A non-Washingtonian (individual or group) of national or international reputation whose time in DC represented a significant period, in time or importance, within the entirety of their life and work.

If no individual or organized group is associated with a site, but a significant event took place there, the event must be demonstrably important to Washington, DC, or national history.

In addition, ONE of the following criteria must be met:

- a. There are reasonable grounds for believing that the nominee(s) is regarded as eminent by a majority of members of their own profession, calling or community;
- b. The nominee has made some important positive contribution to human welfare or happiness;
- c. The nominee's contribution is unique or exceptional;
- d. The nominee shall have been such an exceptional and outstanding personality that the well-informed passer-by immediately recognizes his or her name.
- e. The nominated event shall be of considerable significance in DC or national history.
