Reader's Guide

This is the fifteenth edition of INDICES published by the District of Columbia Government. The primary goal of INDICES is to provide a snapshot of the District of Columbia government operations. The snapshot contains data quantifying human and physical services delivered, legislative activities and general profile of the District. INDICES is developed to satisfy seven basic information needs which are: to provide statistical summaries of services delivered by agencies; provide a comprehensive overview of government activities; provide information that is accessible to the reader in format and content; provide information to facilitate the identification of trends; to provide a holistic picture of a service where there may be a number of different providers; continued delivery of a branded product; and potential for synergy between electronic and non-electronic products.

Departments and agencies of the District government provide information for INDICES. The staff of the Office of Planning/State Data Center collaborates with all entities to identify and present information that will help government agencies, residents, students, researchers, businesses and non-profit organizations gain insight into the range of services offered by the District government. Most of the data contained in this edition were collected in calendar years 2008 through 2010.

This reference book is organized into eleven chapters, covering such topics as government finance, economic development, human services, District-wide and neighborhood planning, community services, education, public safety, real estate services and housing trends.

This edition of INDICES is prepared by the Office of Planning, under the executive authority of the mayor.
